An advertisement in a Kansas newspaper reads: "Wanted, a mule."

"Must be reasonable."

The Byrd expedition has accumulated a deficit of $30,000 or so.

Four in the southern polo fields.

The expedition's assets have become frozen.

Then there is the one on the publisher who abandoned the mid-week prayer meeting because "it was ten months before the officers of the church found it out."

They are telling the story on a farmer who refused to appeal of a "hook agent" to buy his land.

"Worked My Farm for a Profit," by saying that he was too busy to read fiction.

Sodium rhodante is a new drug that is supposed to prolong life.

For at least two years, why wouldn't it be a good thing to give the administration to give business a shot of the stuff.

The man who goes through life on the theory that tomorrow will take care of itself usually wakes up too late to discover that no greater failure ever existed. This philosophy is born of a lack of energy to provide for the future and an unwillingness to deny oneself of today's pleasures that tomorrow may be provided for.

One of the best paragraphs we have seen appeared recently in an exchange that came to our table.

The paragraph is as follows: "Five schemes for Congress training everybody to expect somebody else to take care of them. Yet the country is buying a hundred billion cigarettes a year and paying a million dollars a year in liquor tax."

How true it is that what looks like the end of the road, is only the turn of the road, the beginning of a new and more beautiful journey.

The above paragraph was written by Mary Pickford, the divorced wife of Douglas Fairbanks. It is possibly a sincere expression of her own experience, since, instead of allowing the "beat" in this family to sink her, Mary Pickford has battled on and is making a reputation for herself on her own account. It is the spirit of many that her stock will continue to go up and Douglas Fairbanks will gradually fade out of the picture.

Most people believe that this country should proceed cautiously on any old-age pension plan until it has been tried out and more is known about it. It would be better to start with a small amount at an advanced age and give it a trial. It will be easy to lower the age and increase the amount as time goes on and "nice dentists don't sink her, Mary Pickford has battled on and is making a reputation for herself on her own account. It is the spirit of many that her stock will continue to go up and Douglas Fairbanks will gradually fade out of the picture."

A politician is an individual who can convince both sides that he is for them. In localities where the law and duty question is an issue, a successful politician will have the law believing that at heart he is not and the duty believing that he is ready to sacrifice his all upon the altar of duty. The politician is a man who can't be all to the people all the time. It is comparatively easy to fool enough of them enough of the time to carry the election.

Pensacola Journal: Whatever may be happening to the recovery program as a whole, the cost of living seems to be making an extremely successful comeback.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace announced that meat prices will be up 32 percent by 1936. Beef and pork will be up 22 percent by July 1. Potatoes, steak and bacon are apt to be classed as "company dishes" before the year is over.

All of which lends some point to the complaint of the People's Lobby that the consumer is getting a pretty poor sort of protection in the campaign to put the farmer in better shape.

There may be exaggeration in the lobby's assertion that the recent "purge" in AAA means that "exploiting and profiteering interests have got control of the agency," but it is a pretty good thing that the consumer is getting more than his share of the food.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY

By Russell Kay.

One thing about these newspaper boys around the Suwannee River, they don't permit either business or politics to interfere with their fishing and while they all work hard and turn out some mighty good papers, they still find time to play occasionally and they're more neighborly than any other group in the state.

Last Saturday at the invitation of "little" Roy Child, I journeyed to Cedar Keys to join his gang on an old fashioned deep sea fishing trip and I mean it was just the time to play occasionally and they're more neighborly than any other group in the state.

His Honor, the Mayor, was of a regular host. Instead of meeting us in a hot hat and coat with a police escort and the traditional "trick" key to the city, he was at the dock with a pair of overalls and a broad-brimmed straw boater that would have been right at home in the Suwannee River.

We were led down to the dock where they had a big sea-going motor launch. The launch carried all of us—men, women and children. That's another thing about these Suwannee River boys, they take the whole family along with them.

They were all fixed up a lot of swell vittles and they had a couple of colored boys along to fry the fish and two boys to tell you they sure knew their stuff. I've sunk my fangs in many a slab of fried fish, but that fish dinner didn't last fifteen miles out in the gulf was just about the sweetest feed I ever consumed.

It was a beautiful day. Old Mother Nature smiled up perfectly. The air was full of the perfume of the sea and the sun was shining down on the water. It was just too hot for Mr. Fish.

Roy Child had a hard time finding a seat till three fellows got up and went to the front of the boat and he took their places. I saw George from Perry was the life of the party as usual and Clayton Coddington was running round a polo shirt looking for a bang-tailed seahorse.

There were two preachers on board but that didn't seem to matter. The preachers were occupied with their fishing. Gilbert Freeman missed the boat. It was a pretty good thing that they got out to sea before the boat was launched.

Most of the gang got to Cedar Keys before the boat was launched. The boat was launched and the gang was on their way. The boat was launched and the gang was on their way.

The boat was launched and the gang was on their way. The boat was launched and the gang was on their way. The boat was launched and the gang was on their way.

Independent Press on Faith in the President

"No one witnessing the demonstration of glowing fraternity between the members of the House of Representatives and the President at the Founders Day celebration of the National Association would believe for an instant that there is, or could be, press-white House friction. Nowhere else in the world does the head of a nation come into such personal, happy contact with the representatives of the press; an evidence of democracy which must thrill those who believe in the underlying principles of our government." — New York Editor and Publisher, (Ind.)

"Franklin Delano Roosevelt has lasted the bitter and the sweet. He has courageously and wisely accepted the responsibility of the nation and he has shown the wisdom of a statesman. He is the only man in the world who has shown the wisdom of a statesman. He is the only man in the world who has shown the wisdom of a statesman."

"The apparent fact is that Roosevelt has quite consistently been the best of the right and the left but has been 'going straight ahead towards a distinctly defined goal of restoration to this nation.'" — Worcester Post, (Ind.)

"Mr. Roosevelt has grown in strength partly because of his own application and wisdom and partly because neither conservative nor radical are using the excuse of being in the wrong to prevent a program worth a moment's consideration. He still remains an immense popular favorite. His is the only headed in the land." — San Francisco Argonaut, (Ind.)

"In his conferences with the President, Franklin Roosevelt has shown a wisdom and a wisdom that is beyond the power of newspaper correspondents and the writer to put on paper. It is a wisdom that is beyond the power of newspaper correspondents and the writer to put on paper."

"We have spent a good deal of time wondering about what this, that or the other group will do. President Roosevelt seems to have suggested the answer. Government, he reminds us, is simply the forcing of all elements in the nation's life." — Terre Haute Star, (Rep.)

"Persistent discussion of the question of whether the President will turn to the 'right' or the 'left' seems to lack much sense. It is better to discuss the question of whether the President will turn to the 'right' or the 'left' seems to lack much sense."

"America has faith in Roosevelt, approves what he has done and wants him to go on doing it. The present Congress, for example, is both a vote of confidence in Roosevelt and a vote of confidence in the New Deal and popular marching order to go forward boldly and produce results." — Liberty Magazine, (Ind.)

"A wagish columnist has said that Roosevelt rules by 'charm.' He may deny his statesmanship but we admire his political sagacity. Friend and foe join in sincere appreciation of his human attributes. And acclaim a regular guy who can walk with kings in the White House." — Springfield, Mo., Leader & Press, (Rep.)
